ABSTRACT

Based upon data gathered annually by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC), this directory provides information on 1,230 community, junior, and technical colleges in the United States and its territories, including 1974 and 1975 statistics on enrollments and personnel. Following introductory material on the purposes of the directory, a data summary, suggestions for interpreting the data, and a list of changes in institutions since the previous year are presented. Next, the directory lists each two-year college alphabetically by state or country and provides the following information: location; chief executive officer; telephone number; year college classes began; type of control or affiliation; AACJC membership; accrediting agency; type of academic calendar; October 1974 and 1975 full- and part-time and total enrollments; community education enrollments in October 1975; full- and part-time and total faculty, professional staff, and administrators as of October 1975; and tuition and fees required in 1975-76. Next, tables are presented summarizing enrollment and personnel data by state for all institutions and for public and independent junior colleges. Following a table showing distribution of size of enrollment in two-year colleges, the directory concludes with lists of community, junior, and technical college organizations and state administrators for two-year college education, and an alphabetical listing of colleges. INTRODUCTION

This is the 1976 edition of the Community, Junior, and Technical College Directory. As in previous numbers, this issue of the publication reports as fully as possible on enrollments in two-year institutions as of fall 1975 as well as other important statistics.

From the morass of data collected for the 1976 edition of the Directory emerges an astounding story of growth in this sector of postsecondary education (see analysis). Despite the rather dismal economic climate of the country, the numbers of men and women, young and old, going to community junior colleges and technical institutes increased dramatically this year over last. Private as well as public colleges experienced increases. The picture is mindful of the boom of the 1960's when new institutions were being established at the rate of 30 to 50 per year and existing colleges were expanding programs and facilities to meet new needs.

The Directory, of course, presents facts and information—not stories. It does not engage in conjecture about the why and wherefore of changing patterns of college-going. It is sufficient to suggest that the change can be traced to these factors: more and more older people are returning to or starting college, unemployed Americans are turning to the institutions for training that will make them employable, many younger students are entering the hometown college rather than out-migrating to distant and more expensive colleges and universities.

One interesting new addition to the data is that pertaining to community education enrollments. This category should support often enunciated claims that community colleges are providing many opportunities for educational and cultural enrichment through various kinds of noncredit courses and programs. Other data have been collected that will be made available through supplements to the Directory, including information on enrollments and personnel by sex.

As the only national nonprofit professional organization serving all elements of community, junior, and technical colleges, the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges recognizes its responsibility to maintain a national data bank on two-year institutions. The Directory represents one of the major yearly efforts in data collection—but other kinds of surveys are also conducted in connection with projects and programs.

In addition to the college listings, the Directory contains names and addresses of state directors of community and junior college education and information on state and regional organizations of two-year institutions. Not an AACJC membership directory per se, the book includes names and data for many nonprofit institutions that do not hold memberships. We have tried to make the publication as comprehensive as possible by including nonprofit postsecondary education institutions that are organized on a two-year basis, have state recognition and/or regional accreditation, and offer two-year associate degree programs. The Directory does not include information on proprietary institutions.

One of the problems encountered in producing compendiums such as the Directory is that of timeliness. The Association, thanks to the cooperation of colleges that have been surveyed, has during the past two years cut the time lag between opening of college to the actual production of the Directory to about three months. We believe this has contributed greatly to the usefulness of the book and the data it contains.

In terms of processing, the staff, while relying on reporting colleges for accuracy of the information, attempted where possible to clarify and correct questionnaires when there appeared to be errors. Response was excellent, as the final report will show.

We are pleased to present the 1976 Community, Junior, and Technical College Directory.

The Data/Some Interpretations

by Sandra Drake

Two-year college enrollment reported as of October 1975 represents the largest yearly increase since 1968. (See Table A.) In October 1974, 3,527,340 students were enrolled for credit courses in two-year colleges, technical institutes, or two-year branch campuses of four-year colleges and universities. The comparable figure for October 1975 is 4,069,279, an increase of 15.4 percent.

Increases from October 1974 to October 1975 occurred in approximately 77 percent of the institutions reporting data for both years; eight percent of the institutions report no change in enrollment; and 14 percent show a decrease in enrollment. Enrollment increases occurred in both independent and public institutions as Tables B and C indicate.

Based on data from the colleges that reported enrollment by full-time and part-time status, 42.7 percent of the students enrolled full-time and 57.3 percent enrolled part-time in 1974; 43.9 percent and 56.1 percent enrolled full-time and part-time respectively in October 1975. Applying these percentages to the total enrollment for each year, 3,527,340 for 1974 and 4,069,279 for 1975, the data show an increase of 18.6 percent in part-time enrollment and 12.9 percent in full-time enrollment.

All October 1974 data used in the above computations are from the 1975 Directory. Enrollment figures for 1974 as reported in this edition of the Directory differ slightly from 1974 enrollment data as reported in the previous edition because various corrections, additions, and deletions to the data have been made since last year.

Total faculty has increased from 163,775 to 181,260 (10.7 percent). Administrative staff total 15,488; professional support staff, 11,537. Last year 18,626 administrators were reported. The difference between that figure and the 15,488 reported this year is probably accounted for by the new category, professional support staff. Since a number of colleges do not report librarians, counselors, and other professional staff as either faculty or administration, this new category was added to more completely reflect the number of professionals employed at two-year institutions.

The 1976 Directory lists 1,230 two-year institutions, compared with 1,203 in last year's edition. This total includes six campuses and 12 colleges enrolling students for the first time in 1974-75; 28 institutions are included this year which were not included in the 1975 Directory. The total also reflects other changes as noted on page 5.

Among the institutions not listed previously are nine technical institutes in Alabama. These institutes were in operation before the fall of 1975 but their names had not been included among available listings. A total of 25 technical institutes operate in Alabama; we have included only those that grant the associate degree and that responded to our request for current data.

Two other institutions listed in this edition, the Hudson County Community College Commission in New Jersey and the Vermont Institute of Community Involvement, began enrolling students in the fall of 1975 and are authorized by their state boards to grant associate degrees.

The total number of institutions is obtained by counting each unit of a particular institution. For example: in California, each institution within a district is counted as one; in Iowa, each unit or campus of colleges is counted as one; in Wisconsin, each location of a technical institute is counted as one. Because we list each of these units separately, we also request data from each unit. However, the reporting of enrollment and other data from each unit is not consistent throughout Table I of the Directory because some institutions prefer not to break out their data by individual units or campuses. In some cases, data reported this year by the parent institution were reported last year by the individual units of these parent institutions. Although we have attempted to maintain a consistent format throughout, we have necessarily reported the data as we receive them from the institutions.

The format of Table I has undergone other changes since the 1975 edition. For the previous edition we requested each institution to report not only current fall enrollment but also to report previous fall enrollment by freshman, sophomore, and unclassified status. For this edition we requested only the fall 1975 enrollment and used the previously reported fall 1974 enrollment data. Table I, therefore, includes full-time, part-time, and total headcount enrollment for fall 1974 as well as for fall 1975, but does not include freshman, sophomore, and unclassified enrollment for 1974.

Table I also includes an estimated community education enrollment, defined as the total number of people participating in noncredit activities sponsored by a college. This figure, a total of 1,337,267, provides some indication of the number of people who are served in these specially designed programs though it probably does not cover the total picture.

Most of the data shown in Table I by institution is summarized in Tables II, III, IV by state. It should be noted, however, that in these summary tables the full-time and part-time enrollment by state for both 1974 and 1975 will not equal the total enrollment for these two years. This occurs because, while most colleges in each state have reported a total headcount figure, many colleges have not reported their full-time, part-time enrollment.

Reports on fall 1975 enrollment from some colleges (approximately 100) have not been received; in Table I, we have carried over 1974 total enrollment for these institutions.

This year as well as last, we requested additional data from the colleges that do not appear in the Directory. This information includes: degrees and certificates granted during the academic year 1974-75; enrollment in occupational and transfer programs; enrollment, faculty, and administrative data by sex; average age of students; and percent of students transferring after two years. These data will be available, by state, in a supplement to the Directory which will be mailed to AACJC members or which can be ordered in the spring of 1976.
